V/s

Mr.Rajendra Bhandari, Advocate for the Appellant.

CORAM : R.M. SAVANT, J.

DATE : 18TH MAY, 2007.
(VACATION COURT)

P.C.

. This appeal impugned the order dated 13th April, 2007 passed by the learned Judge of City Civil Court, by which order ad interim reliefs are refused to the appellant.

2. The appellant is the original plaintiff and has filed suit No. 1431/2007 apprehending that he would be dispossessed from the premises in question. Admittedly the premises are owned by respondent No.2, who is mother of the appellant. Respondent No.1, who is brother of the appellant is also residing in the said premises. Learned Judge in the impugned order has recorded the finding that the apprehension of the appellant is mis-founded and therefore, no ad interim relief would be granted. I do not find any error committed by the learned Judge in passing the said order. The appeal is accordingly dismissed.
